

Teach Central America Week:

Preserving Legacy and Culture in LA

More than seven million Central Americans reside in the United States today, yet our stories and contributions continue to be undertold.

JOIN US

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10TH, from 6-8 PM for
TEACH CENTRAL AMERICA WEEK @CSULA

The Library Community Room B-131 (Park: Parking Lot C)

to highlight the community work of artists and activists, Dora Magaña and Ricardo O'Meany. Participants will be able to tour a student-curated exhibit about Dora's life as well as explore additional primary sources housed in CSULA's special collections.

Cindy Mata (UCI History Project Director) will moderate a panel discussion with CSULA professors Enrique Ochoa, Alex Villalpando, Leda Ramos, and CAHAAS co-founder Claudia Portillo to highlight Los Angeles' Central American history, preservation efforts, and teaching opportunities. Additionally, Azalea Camacho, Archivist & Special Collections Librarian, will walk us through the student exhibit and archives, featuring the narratives of our community.

Great opportunity to convivir, and be in community together.

REGISTER HERE!

For more information
TEAM@CAHAAS.ORG

Cal State LA Central American Studies Faculty Committee
Latin American Studies Program

